AUTO ACCIDENT

Car accidents are one of the most common causes of personal injury. These incidents, sometimes seemingly small, result in a shocking number of severe injuries and even deaths. According to the Texas Department of Transportation, 1 person is injured every 2 minutes and 8 seconds from a motor vehicle crash. And in 2015, there were 4,440 injuries from car crashes in Dallas.

In addition to disability, victims often experience substantial pain and suffering, emotional distress, lost wages, medical expenses and property damage. Sadly, many car accident victims never receive the full amount of damages to which they are entitled. Very often, car accident victims, unaware of the full value of their claims, accept the first offer from their insurance company because they are too overwhelmed with recovering from their injuries.

Never talk to the insurance company prior to obtaining legal representation. The insurance company wants to settle your case as soon as possible – and for as little money as possible. After an accident, you need time to determine just how serious your injury is, what medical treatment or physical therapy you need, and how much your lost wages will be. Therefore, it is crucial to retain a qualified car accident attorney with knowledge about Texas law, as soon as possible to achieve maximum compensation.
